MACROSCOPIC DESCRIPTION

Volakas White marble, also known as White Floe marble, is a precious natural stone, extracted from Northern Greece quarries. A marble of renowned elegance, White Volakas is characterized by a white background with fine veining that may vary in color from cream, hazelnut and light grey, a marble that recalls some of the most beautiful Tuscan marbles. Volakas White is available in two different types: Classic - with parallel veining and Cloudy - in which the veining create particular cloudy color shadings.

White Volakas marble is a natural stone very used in projects of classical and traditional look, a material capable of offering personality and elegance to spaces. The finishes most used for this natural stone are polished, honed, brushed and sandblasted.
