MACROSCOPIC DESCRIPTION

Skiros marble (sometimes spelled as Skyros) is a Greek marble whose color may vary from light grey to pinkish white to medium grey. Its beautiful background is crossed by lighter or darker clouds of color and golden and plum veining, characteristic that gives this natural stone originality and personality.

Known and used from ancient times in the Roman Empire, Skiros marble enhances the beauty of many historical monuments and artworks around the World, especially Greece and Italy. Skiros marble may be used in interior design projects and exterior ones; thanks to its resistance to weather agents and usage, its beauty doesn't fade over time.
